Arin M. Dunn focuses his practice on the management, prevention, and dispute resolution of business, intellectual property, employment, and corporate legal concerns. Arin graduated with honors from the University of Oregon. While attending the University of Washington School of Law, he worked for the US District Court and Washington State Supreme Court. In his initial years as an attorney, Arin worked for large corporations, but now primarily serves smaller entities and individuals in Oregon and Washington. Much of his business work is in the arts, professional services, computer software, computer hardware, and manufacturing industries.

Mark Beatty is a registered patent attorney. His practice includes intellectual property litigation, protection, acquisition, application, prosecution, and licensing. He has represented clients before juries, in court, and on appeal. Mr. Beatty has drafted and prosecuted patent applications in the mechanical, software, and electrical arts, among others. He reviews intellectual property licensing and technology transfer agreements. He consults with clients on a wide range of business and intellectual property issues.

An outline appears on the next page.
